On The Cover

Whether on the green shavings or the green grass, we feel these ewes are winners in the MacCauley flock! The cool weather of autumn usually brings with it the anticipation and preparation for NAILE ; however, like many of you, with all of the unrest and uncertainty, we have yet to decide if we will participate in NAILE this year. Instead, we look forward to the end of 2020 and welcome 2021 with open arms and with great anticipation for the upcoming lambing season!

With the goals of performance in the show ring and production in the barn, our flock strives to produce "Functional Suffolks with Style." The entire program emphasizes structural soundness, easy fleshing on grass, superior maternal instincts, male fertility and breed character. As the industry continues to change and the demand for more functional, performance-oriented sheep increases, we look forward to the challenge of meeting that demand with sheep that can perform in all arenas.

The service sires for the fall breeding season were selected for their fertility, overall performance, structural correctness and three-dimensional design - natural thickness, length of body and depth of rib. They include MacCauley 3356, 3484, 3584, 3708, 3830, 3836, 3878, 3879, 4181, 4350 and 4407.

The MacCauley team would like to extend a big thank you to all our customers, both loyal and new! Your successes and faith in our breeding program mean the world to us! Another big thank you goes to Dr. Tad and Amanda Thompson, Billy Wade and the entire crew at Reproductive Specialties for their expertise in sheep reproduction.

The MacCauley flock consists of over 400 brood ewes owned by Bill, Betsy, Chris and Kyle MacCauley all under the expert care of Evan Snyder, Farm Manager. It is truly a family business born out of a lifelong passion and a hobby gone wild.

To see MacCauley Suffolks in action plan a trip to the farm in Atglen, PA. Or, at the very least, visit the website www.maccauleysheep.com.
